The institution employs a structured process to assess and support students' learning levels from the beginning of their academic journey. The initial assessment plays a crucial role in identifying students' baseline knowledge and learning gaps. This approach aligns with the NAAC core value of leveraging technology effectively in educational assessments.

Rather than relying solely on the initial test, institution also uses continuous assessment to monitor students' learning progress. This includes quizzes, assignments, and classroom interactions, ensuring that students are regularly evaluated throughout the academic year. Continuous assessment helps identify students who demonstrate improvement and ensures that learning interventions are adjusted accordingly. It also promotes well-rounded, competent individuals who contribute to national development, another key value emphasized by NAAC.

Support programs for advanced learners are designed to engage them in deeper areas of interest. These students are offered opportunities to participate in honors programs, which cover advanced topics beyond the regular curriculum.

For slow learners, the institution provides remedial classes to help them grasp fundamental concepts. Peer tutoring is another important initiative, where advanced learners assist slow learners in understanding difficult subjects. This collaborative environment supports the NAAC core value of inculcating a value system, promoting cooperation and empathy among students.
